This course is an intermediate course in macroeconomics, building on Economics I and II.

Objective

The main objective of this course is to give students a deeper understanding of macroeconomic questions that are important for economic policy in a small open economy like the Norwegian. A central theme is the question: Which economic policy gives the best prospects for sustainable economic growth and macroeconomic stability? Here, the special role of the petroleum revenues for Norwegian fiscal policy will be taken into consideration. The strategy for spending petroleum revenues also has implications for industrial structure and structural policies.

Stabilization policy is another important theme in this course. One issue is fiscal policy rules. Another is the effects of monetary and fiscal policy on inflation and business cycles under flexible exchange rates and high international capital mobility. Special attention will be devoted to flexible inflation targeting as a framework for monetary policy.
