Introduction

Objective

The purpose of this course is to give students an understanding of individuals' behavior and attitudes, how decisions are made, and how social interactions can be understood. The aim is to give the students a nuanced understanding of the most important psychological processes in organizations. This course also gives an introduction to theories of management and leadership. In this regard emphasis is placed on a broad frame of reference for managerial behavior and how this affects organizations in various ways.

Prerequisites

No particular prerequisites are required.

Computer-based tools

This course uses Blackboard and Apollon, where course information is available. These systems may also include information from the lecturer, although this may vary depending on circumstance. The students are themselves responsible for their eventual internet subscriptions.

Course structure

Full time and part time.

This course includes 42 academic hours of teaching. 6 of these hours are dedicated to exam relevant training and the lecturer decides how these hours should be used. Regular reading, participation in study groups, attending all lectures, and work on the net-based multiple choice tests, when available, are strongly recommended learning activities.

BI distance learning

BI arranges intensive teaching modules at the beginning of the term and before the exam takes place. At BI distance learning a study guide is used in addition to the compulsory course literature.

Examination

A five-hour individual written exam concludes the course.

Examination code(s)

ORG 96011 - written exam, which accounts for 100% of the grade in ORG 9601 Organizational Psychology and Management, 6 ECTS credits.
