Introduction

The Internship includes eight weeks of editorial trainee service in Norwegian media. It can be performed in paper media, broadcasting or digital media.

Learning outcome

Acquired knowledge

The Internship is meant to further develop and deepen the journalistic and editorial knowledge the students have obtained during the first two years at school.

Acquired skills

Through editorial practice, students will:

- Master the journalistic and editorial skills in a professional newsroom.
- Be able to publish their work continuously.
- Be able to relate relevant theory to the editorial practice they are set to be a part of.

Reflection

The students should learn good work ethics. In this the editorial supervisor has an important role, in addition to professional response from editors and colleges.

Prerequisites

To get Internship, the students must have completed all JOU courses in second year.

Compulsory reading

Other:

Studentene skal selv velge pensum på ca 600 sider. Valg av pensum skal begrunnes i prosjektoppgaven.

Recommended reading

Course outline

The subjects can vary in different media, but normally it will contain one or more of these subjects:

- News in media
- Editing and desk work

- Reportage and feature.

Computer-based tools

The students use the tools available in the editorial office.

Learning process and workload

The students work normal hours, that is 300 hours during eight weeks. They must be prepared to work some in the weekends. They participate in editorial meetings and follow instructions from the editors.

In June there will be arranged an Internship seminary as well as halfway in the Internship. The students shall write a short Internship report following a special instruction. This report will make the foundation for the final Project paper.
